What is Solebury?

Imagine going to school and being energized. Imagine feeling respected, understood, and appreciated by your teachers. Imagine having the opportunity to discover new interests and pursue the things you already love vigorously and fully. Imagine a place where being different is celebrated, and where people are kind to one another. This is what the founders of Solebury School wanted to make a reality. An intentionally small boarding and day school in Solebury, PA, Solebury fosters a magical learning environment in which students' individual interests are supported and developed. The 140-acre-campus has the friendly feel of a small campus, but with the structure necessary to inspire teenagers to become life-long learners.

At Solebury, students and teachers are partners in learning. They work together to critical thinking skills relevant to the local, national, and global issues of the day. A to understand both society and self, Solebury students recognize how their individual is intertwined with the world, and they gain the skills and inspiration to improve the communities.

The Solebury Approach to Education

Solebury keeps their student body close-knit, with 235 students and a student-to-teacher ratio of 6 to 1. Every Solebury student is expected to strive for educational excellence, and the community at Solebury is prepared to encourage this excellence. Cooperative learning among students and teachers is the Solebury ethos, and it prepares students for life in college and beyond.

Teachers and staff at Solebury believe all young people love to learn, and that it is their responsibility to develop a challenging and creative curriculum that makes this curiosity a lifelong trait. Students are encouraged and supported to dive deeply into what they are interested in, and find success in academics and beyond. At Solebury, students have the opportunity to explore their passions and focus their academic pursuits by choosing concentration in one of four areas, offering a distinctive path to graduation: STEM, Liberal Arts, Education, Social Justice, and Teach2Serve (social entrepreneurship).

Life on Campus

Solebury's campus is home to enchanting historical buildings alongside brand new art facilities. Just 90 minutes from New York City, Solebury is located in charming I along the Delaware River, nestled within acres upon acres of greenery. In 2018, Nev named "The Prettiest Town in Pennsylvania" by Architectural Digest.

Families may choose to have their children board on campus, or to attend day clas weekends, both day students and boarding students have opportunities to experie adventures, such as trips to Philadelphia and New York City, hikes, bonfires, and ski weeknights, boarders have up to 90 minutes of study hall, during which they work on any schoolwork they need extra support to complete. Students who live in dorm Soleburyspeak candidly about the meaningful friendships they form with their fellow as well as the benefits of living with their academic community.

Solebury's Mission Has Remained Consistent

Ultimately, it is the relationship between faculty and students that makes Solebury other schools. In 1925 Solebury was founded to create a school where individual students be encouraged to develop their personal talents and capabilities. Today, this principle of individual needs continues to guide the Solebury community, in which intellectual and independent thinking are of paramount importance. In meeting individual students and encouraging students to push themselves to learn more, a diverse community of opinions, thoughts, and creativities is formed. This individuality and diversity is deeply valued by all Solebury students and teachers.
